Delaware law requires persons and businesses in certain professions to obtain a valid license from the Division of Professional Regulation before practicing in the profession or operating the business in Delaware. The purpose of professional licensing is to establish that the person or business is qualified and meets all requirements to provide services in the profession. Certain events, such as Gaming or Combative Sports events, may also require a permit from the Division.

Professional License vs. Business License

A professional license from the Division of Professional Regulation is not the same as a business license from the Delaware Division of Revenue. Most businesses need both to operate in Delaware. For information about Delaware business licenses, see One Stop Business Registration and Licensing.
