

BOARD OF ELECTION MEMBER BIO.'S

Elaine Bole: Spent over 15 years working in broadcast news in Washington, D.C. before leaving journalism for international development and human rights advocacy.

Ms. Bole has worked with refugees since 1993 during the war in the former-Yugoslavia, and later in Sierra Leone, Rwanda, Uganda, the West Bank and Iraq. She worked on humanitarian and relief issues at the United Nations High Commission for Refugees and for World Vision, leading and managing a diverse array of projects, such as strategic media outreach for rapid-response disaster relief and in-field TV specials and press coverage of conflicts. Ms. Bole developed with philanthropist Pam Omidyar a traveling interactive children's museum exhibit called Torn from Home: My Life as Refugee, designed to provide a hands-on opportunity to experience life in a refugee camp. The exhibit opened at Lied's Children's Museum in Las Vegas in June 2008. The exhibit's tour schedule was booked until March 2013. She is currently working on a multimedia project locating the refugee children she interviewed in war zones to hear about their life today as adults. She is also currently a contributing writer for the Current newspaper in Washington, D.C. Prior to her humanitarian work, Ms. Bole was executive producer of Washington, D.C.'s award winning syndicated National Public Radio shows, The Derek McGinty Show and Public Interest with Kojo Nnamdi. Elaine earned a MA in Journalism and Public Affairs from American University and was a Reuters Journalism Fellow at the University of Oxford (Green College), England. She grew up in Dover, Delaware and now resides in both Dewey Beach, Delaware and Washington, D.C. She has volunteered her time to the Town of Dewey working on a Town newsletter and development and revamping of the Town's website. She has served on the Town of Dewey Beach's Comprehensive Plan Review Committee and the Charter & Code Review Committee. Bole is the President of the Marina View Home Owner's Association in Dewey Beach, a 46 unit, 22 million dollar residential complex. She is serving her second three year term.

Marty Tarr: Born & raised in Kentucky & worked for 42 years in education in Kentucky, New Jersey, & Maryland. Retired in 2013 after serving as a high school principal in Frederick, MD the last 24 years. Married, with one daughter & 2 granddaughters.
